

Role of the academic library in the e- learning society with reference of issues and future challenges

A.V. Muditha Ankumbura

Assistant Librarian

University of the Visual and performing Arts

Abstract

Information is creating and growing at a tremendous speed by day to day activities. The information technology is rapidly changing in the developing world. Because of information explosion and technological changes the society has become an information society and knowledge society. As the result of current radical changes information users and their information seeking behaviors also have changed. Information seekers have used to search the information from electronic resources than printed sources at the information society. So the available of e-information services and sources to the users is becoming very essential. The emerging web based e- learning and teaching environment also has influenced to each aspect of the library and information service. It requires librarians to change their role form traditional librarian to information specialist by applying new technologies to provide quality electronic information services in the e society.